elecom networks and virtual network operators can use equipment only from trusted suppliers for upgradation or expansion of existing networks, the government said, in a move that may further thwart use of Chinese gear in telecom networks by carriers. The amendment to licence conditions, which takes effect from 15 June, will not be applicable to annual maintenance contracts, the department of telecommunications said in a notice issued on Monday, directed at unified access services licence holders, unified licence holders and virtual network operator license holders.

"With effect from 15th June 2021, the licencee, shall only  $connect\,trusted\,products\,in\,its$ network and also seek permission from designated authority for upgradation or expansion of existing network utilizing the telecommunication equipment not designated as trusted products," the department said in the notice. "However, these directions will not affect ongoing annual maintenance contracts or updates to existing equipment already inducted in the network as on date of effect," it added.

DoT clamps down on Whisky-loving India among top 10 important countries'

The Glenmorangie CEO said after a cask of 1975 scotch whisky sold for a record £16 million

varuni.khosla@livemint.com NEW DELHI

cask of rare Scotch whisky datingbackto 1975 took the world by storm when it sold for £16 million, smashing the earlier record of £1 million set in April. The single malt, produced at the Ardbeg distillery on the Scottish island of Islay, was bought by a private collector in Asia.

In an interview with Mint, Thomas Moradpour, chief executive, The Glenmorangie Co., said the firm, owned by Moët Hennessy-Louis Vuitton, will deliver 440 bottles of the single malt from Cask No.3 to the unnamed owner over the next five years.

The Ardbeg distillery was acquired in 1997 by The Glenmorangie Co.

Traditionally the company's collectors or fans belong to Ardbeg, the home base, the US and the Americas, besides markets in Asia. "It's no accident that Asia has been the most dynamic, and it is a historic milestone for us," Moradpour said.

While declining to share global sales numbers, he said the subcontinent is a very important market since Indians "love whisky".

"India is in the top 10 countries of importance for us," he added.

'We see a trend in that notion of collectibility, and we stimulate that collectibility. We've seen a lot with limited edition releases of very weird, fun products.

Moradpour said this was the first time a unique sale like this had taken place in the brand's over-200 years of history where a spirit made on Islay in November 1975 had been sold at a private auction. "Ardbeg has been around for a long time and has a roller coaster history. It's a distillery that almost disappeared twice in the 1980s and in 1990s before The Glenmorangie Co. acquired it. Before the 1990s most of what we produced went into blends. So very little stock was reserved for single malts. In fact, stocks from the 1970s are almost impossible to find.' The company, he said, started a programme close to three years ago to sell rare casks of both Ardbeg and Glenmorangie to private buyers, after recognising that they had whiskies in their stock that were ready for private connoisseurs. It sold a number of rare whiskies for between £169,174 and £1,691,740 with great success. Like art, rare whiskies have found many collectors. According to a Knight Frank Wealth

Report, in the last decade, rare whiskies were a top performing asset class in its Luxury Investment Index, which tracks a basket of rare bottles sold at auctions. This increased 428% in value over the 10 years and 9% in the past year alone.

"Excellent products are being made in many places by many distillers. It is our job to be agile and we have been quite successful in last three years. Our demand exceeds our supply. For this we are increasing our capacity,' he added.

Bollywood set for bumper box office collections in 2H

lata.j@livemint.com NEW DELHI

he Hindi film industry is expected to post a more than 60% jump in revenues in the second half of this calendar year, overcoming its poor show in the first half, buoyed by a slew of big-ticket releases and several extended weekends in the coming months. Trade experts expect Bollywood to garner ₹1,400 crore in earnings in the six months through December compared to 350 crore in the first half. With multiple holiday weekends like Independence Day, Dussehra, Diwali and Christmas, there is high expectation from films such as Aamir Khan's Laal Singh Chadha, Akshay Kumar's Raksha Bandhan, Karan Johar's Liger and Brahmastra, Hrithik Roshan and Saif Ali Khan-starrer Vikram Vedha, horror comedy Bhediya (Varun Dhawan and Kriti Sanon), Kartik Aaryan's Shehzada and Cirkus directed by Rohit Shetty

"The second half of the year should definitely be better than the first. Not only are many big Hindi films slated for release we will also see multiple festive weekends. In contrast, the first six months saw very few big films releasing in the Hindi language," said Rajendar Singh Jyala, chief programming officer at INOX Leisure Ltd.

Film trade analysts said

Quality content has returned to cinemas across languages. нт

Hindi movies released in the past few months such as Jersey, Runway 34, Jayeshbhai Jordaar and Anek were mid-sized titles with little spectacle value. That's set to change in the second half with star-studded large-scale productions.

The industry may, however, still lag pre-covid collections of ₹4,000 crore in 2019 but could touch ₹2,200 crore by this year-end if the pandemic remains under control.

Devang Sampat, chief executive at Cinepolis India said the good news is as quality content has returned to cinemas across languages, so have audiences.

"Post the lifting of government restrictions, out of 12 weeks, we were above the 2019 average weekly admits for eight. Other metrics such as SPH (spend per head) have been showing an increasing trend and we have crossed precovid levels," he said.
